

Some translation teams have spent about a month here in Ukarumpa working with advisers on various parts of their Bible translations. On the left are Onobasulu men who worked with an adviser and also Skyped daily with a 2nd advisor in the Netherlands. On the right are Lydia and Rene working with Malol translators Petros and Philip. These are dedicated folks who sacrifice family time and income to come here. I enjoyed praying for these teams and supplying them with “swit kai” (any baked goodie) weekly.

The KK team: James, Nathan, Tuas, Kozak

I continue working through the linguistic and cultural challenges of translation with the local Kamono-Kafe team. We just finished revising Jeremiah and Lamentations in the last two months. What a labor of love! We serve a God who is the ultimate Laborer of Love, giving all for our redemption and eternal life through faith in Christ Jesus.

Please pray for this team who have families, church duties, home upkeep, and other ministries in the area. They sacrifice much to reach their goal of a completed Old Testament.

It was fun to help re-start the Elim Haus Café, a monthly event on Saturday afternoons, with yummy desserts (made by volunteers who love to bake) and gourmet coffee served. We held it outdoors and enjoyed a sunny afternoon with plenty of room to spread out and enjoy fellowship.

I found a kindred spirit in the sewing arena: a ten-year old neighbor who wants to learn how to use patterns. So we had fun with her first project, and I hope to mentor her again soon. I continue to meet with women for walks and prayer time.
